

2nd International Conference on Globalization, Inclusion and Diversity in English Studies (GIDES- 2025)

University of Wah
Quality Education for All

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

About the Conference

The landscape of English Studies is undergoing a dynamic transformation. Globalization, with its interconnectedness and cultural exchange, challenges traditional perspectives on literature and language. This conference invites scholars, educators, and students to engage in critical dialogue through expanding perspectives on inclusion and diversity within the field.

The conference will feature:

- Keynote addresses from leading scholars in the field of globalization, inclusion, and diversity in English Studies
- Panel discussions on a wide range of topics related to the conference theme
- Paper presentations by academics and graduate students exploring their research in these areas
- Workshops designed to equip educators with practical strategies for fostering inclusion and diversity in their classrooms
- Networking opportunities for scholars, educators, and students to connect and share ideas

This conference is a vital platform for:

- Reimagining English Studies as a truly global discipline
- Promoting critical engagement with issues of power, representation, and identity within the English language
- Enriching teaching practices to reflect the diverse experiences of our students
- Building a more inclusive and equitable future for English Studies in an interconnected world

We invite scholars, educators, and students with a passion for English Studies, globalization, inclusion, and diversity to join us for this stimulating and thought-provoking conference!
